

To whom it may concern:

My name is Lindsey Cosh and I currently run the Southern Ontario Aboriginal Diabetes Initiative (SOADI) Foot Care Program. I higher service providers such as: chiropodists, foot care nurses, and reflexologists to provide both one time as well as continual care to aboriginal community members who live with diabetes as well as who are pre-diabetic.

SOADI's Foot Care Program travels throughout southern Ontario visiting various communities offering; diabetic foot screening, reflexology, education, referrals for ongoing care, as well as self care resources. These self care resources are equipped with the tools needed to empower and encourage people to take care of their feet on a daily basis. One of the items in this kit is lotion which is very important in keeping the feet moisturized and healthy.

Land pharmaceuticals has been involved with our program for two and a half years. When I first came in contact with the cream I was very impressed with the ingredients and interested in adding it into our resource kits.

This cream was chosen over the more popular lotions because it was a natural emollient cream that left the skin moisturized without the oily residue. Both myself as well as the clients I received feedback from found the cream more effective than the other leading creams with their chemical compounds.

As a person who works on the grass roots level traveling into communities to service many people, I make it a priority to give my clients the best products they need. Within the years of providing my clients with Land Pharmaceuticals Biodetic Foot Care Cream I have only heard good reviews and have experienced multiple requests from communities across southern Ontario for more creams. Within my ongoing foot care clinics my service providers prefer to use the Biodetic Foot Care Cream on their clients over other leading creams on local store shelves.

Even though our relationship with Land Pharmaceuticals is fairly new with two and half years past I am confident that this emollient cream will remain in our kits and our business relations will grow stronger as the years pass. The product speaks for itself and based on the reviews that I have received, I can foresee no hindrances for a continuing solid relationship.

Thank you for your time:

Lindsey Cosh
